PREFACE

This is a cooperative study prepared by a group of candidates for the Degree of Master of Education. The members of the group and their topics are:

Barrow, Allen, W., Jr., Geography

Benn, Arthur, Sociology

Belton, Garrett C., Economics

McDonough, Patrick, Problems of Democracy

Kadaworth, George, Junior High School American History

Stewart, H. Malcolm, Jr., Civics

Tripp, Frank, Senior High School American History

Our acknowledgments and appreciation are herewith

First Reader: William H. Cartwright, Assistant Professor of Education

Second Reader: W. Linwood Chase, Professor of Education

Third Reader: Franklin C. Roberts, Professor of Education

His advice and counsel. Also, our deep appreciation to the principals and librarians of the public schools for opening their doors and being so helpful in the arrangement of our work. The same appreciation is due the librarians and their staffs in the various town libraries used for research on our projects.

First Reader: William H. Carpenter, Assistant Professor

REFERENCE READING IN SOCIAL STUDIES

The Problem

Definition of Terms

Collateral Reading

Library

Summary

CHAPTER I

The Problem

The problem of this study is to discover the extent to which the books listed as reference reading in secondary school social studies textbooks are available in school and public libraries.

An additional problem is to list the books pertaining to the social studies field which are found in seven junior high school libraries and fourteen senior high school libraries but which are not usually suggested by textbooks.

It has already been established that there is no agreement between textbook writers as to what books should be listed for collateral reading. It is obvious that a list that is suitable and practical should be prepared.

Definition of Terms

It is necessary to define terms that are relevant to a study of this nature so that a clear understanding of what is meant does not leave a question in the mind of the reader.

TEXTBOOK; This refers to the type of book which provides the basic information and organization for a school subject.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general principles of the theory of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the specific properties of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the specific properties of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the specific properties of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the specific properties of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

LIBRARY: This term includes the book collection contained in the central library also the classroom collections.

SUPPLEMENTARY BOOK: This means any book other than the textbook.

Collateral Reading

For a better understanding of the concepts of the social studies, collateral reading is a requisite in order to obtain the desired outcomes. To accomplish this, a constant and ready access to books is necessary.

Great areas of desirable knowledge are beyond the realm of experience. No matter how extensive and varied one's experience may be he is unable to extend it into the past or into all places. In order to secure experience vicariously one must resort to reading.

Every national committee report in the social studies has stressed the need of an ample supply of books. The Committee of Seven, 1899, said; "The library should be the center and soul of all study in history and literature; no vital work can be carried on without books to which pupils may have ready and constant access."<sup>1</sup>

The Committee of Five made similar comments in 1910.<sup>1</sup>

Library

No one would deny that collateral reading is necessary in social studies teaching, yet the typical school library is inadequate to carry out a successful social studies program.

The library markedly influences the success or failure of the work in the social studies. The library is, perhaps, the best single index of the quality of instruction that is given in the social studies.<sup>2</sup>

The necessity for a wide selection of books for the library is admitted, but altogether too frequently is not carried out in practice. The worth and usefulness of a library depends upon its use of books.

The desirability of an extensive and expensive laboratory for teaching physics is widely recognized, and is frequently provided. The need for numerous and varied books for teaching the social studies in junior and senior high schools is less widely recognized.<sup>3</sup>

Few schools have an adequate number of the right types of books for teaching the social studies. Schools spend much money on the finest equipment for chemistry and physics laboratories, yet often provide for the pupils little more than the perfunctory acquaintance with books in all subjects. Books are as important to the social studies laboratories as test tubes and retorts are to the chemistry laboratory. Basic materials required for understanding must come from books. Several definite textbooks, printed source materials, as well as current newspapers and periodicals carefully chosen may be regarded as essential.<sup>1</sup>

Textbook reading alone is not enough for the teaching of the social studies. A reading course in conjunction with the textbook seems to be what is desired by progressive educators.

Outside reading should be a vital factor in all work of the social studies. Time and opportunity must be given pupils to enlarge the scope of their reading beyond the textbooks required in the class work. A wider range of reading is necessary.<sup>2</sup>

The importance of the library is firmly established, but unfortunately the well stocked social studies library has not always been realized.

The need of reference books was strongly emphasized by the Madison Conference of 1892, "Recitations alone", it was declared, "cannot possibly make up the proper teaching of history. It is absolutely essential, from the earliest to the last grades, that there should be parallel reading of some kind."<sup>1</sup>

"The main necessity", urged the Conference, "is the teachers should have it firmly in mind that it is as impossible to teach history without reference books as it is impossible to teach chemistry without a glass and rubber tubing."<sup>2</sup>

In the same vein of thinking Wesley says, "In spite of the great need for books and in spite of the long series of recommendations for the enlargement of the libraries, the typical school library is inadequate. That many of the books which they do contain are old and comparatively useless, and that the number is too small to suit the needs of the pupils."<sup>1</sup>

In a more powerful statement, Ernest Horn reiterates both Wesley's and Johnson's opinions. "To neglect the factor of properly equipping a library is to invite disaster. The most restricted list of educational objectives in the social studies cannot be attained with the impoverished equipment that exists in the majority of our schools."<sup>2</sup>

The opinions just cited are substantiated by Lathrop and Brink who report:

A study of the educational facilities of twelve Cape towns in Massachusetts states that the number of library books was less than two hundred for each of the ten high schools studied, except one, and that the majority of the books were not suited to the needs of the school. Not a single school had a library room. Five of these ten high schools made use of public libraries.<sup>3</sup> A high school of not more than a hundred students would be expected to have at least five hundred well selected books, two newspapers, and from five to ten periodicals; one of a thousand or more students to have at least five thousand or more books and forty or more periodicals.<sup>1</sup>

Some schools and towns are not in a financial position to purchase the needed reading material. The teachers, however, cannot escape blame as it is often due to their indifference that books are not obtained. The present writers agree with an earlier author who said,

I firmly believe that a complete library is an absolute necessity for successful teaching in the social studies. Teachers should make every effort to have the school authorities build such collections.<sup>2</sup>

The role of the library in the over all curriculum is accepted without much dissent.

The school library is the center of curricula activities for all students, all teachers, and all the subjects in the school from the first grade through the twelfth. The school library service aides indicate active participation in the attainment of the educational aims of the school. To this end one of its functions is to act as a distributing center for material. All curricula will include library resources. Reading is not an isolated activity. It is a part of the whole curricula program in all grades.<sup>1</sup>

Probably most American teachers can do better teaching with the help of textbooks than without them.

"A textbook serves three main purposes:

1. It provides a basic Organization of the course.
2. It provides a basic content of subject matter.
3. It provides a common tool for learning."<sup>2</sup>

A number of teachers believe that more than one textbook should be used. The supplementary text is abandoned either because of the teacher's lethargy or for fear of replacing the traditional textbook.

The supplementary text does not in any way replace the textbook. Each has its own particular contribution to make. Together they provide for the child those ever broadening experiences which are necessary for his growth - the textbook whetting his appetite and pointing his way; the supplementary book nourishing the curiosity which has been aroused and gives further stimulus to the child's interests. Moreover the flexibility of the supplementary collection makes it possible to provide reading materials appropriate to the varying interests and degrees of ability of the children.<sup>1</sup>

The single text and the supplementary text each have their place in any well-rounded social studies program. Together they form a most effective method of instruction for all types of pupils. "The problem of outside reading is not a single problem, but many problems, almost as many as there are pupils. The child whose scholarship is instructive should not be handled like a child who is adverse to books."<sup>2</sup>

The textbook and supplementary book each has a distinctive function to perform and that both are of vital importance in education of children. These distinct functions should be so dovetailed that there will be a constant stimulation of child interest and child growth.<sup>3</sup>

"We recommend", said the Madison Conference, "that a practice be established in the schools of using two, three or four parallel textbooks at a time. By preparing in different books, or by using more than one book in a lesson, pupils will acquire the habit of comparison and the no less important habit of doubting whether any one book covers the ground."<sup>1</sup>

Summary of 1947 - 1948 study at Boston University

During 1947 - 1948, a series of studies was conducted at Boston University to discover the amount of agreement on reference books as cited in a certain number of textbooks. The work of these studies is presented here, as the results were used to make a master list for the availability study. The following review was taken in part from an article by William H. Cartwright.<sup>2</sup>

Kempton J. Coady compiled a list of all the reading references found in five senior high school American History textbooks, currently in use. He found a total of 2,512 different titles in the five textbooks. Of this number, only 270 were found in three or more of the five textbooks. These 272 books form the senior high school American history section of the master list used in this study.

Charles F. O'Hara worked on eight textbooks in junior high school American history and found 1,951 different titles. O'Hara's working list of 85 books was made of those books common to three or more of the textbooks. The 85 books mentioned here form the junior high school American history section of the master list.

Timothy P. Murphy, in geography, found a total of 1,225 titles in ten textbooks. Only 138, of the 1,225, were found in two or more of the ten textbooks. The above 138 books, thus, form the geography section of the master list.

James R. Donovan found 2,437 different titles in eight high school economics textbooks. Of the 2,437, only 143 were found in two or more of the eight textbooks. As above, the 143 books form the economics section of the master list.

Ralph C. Magnuson found 2,078 different titles in five problems of democracy textbooks. Only 68, of these books, were found in three or more of the textbooks analyzed. The above 68 were incorporated into the problems of democracy section of the master list.

Robert A. Gentry listed 2,697 different titles found in nine civics textbooks. Of this number, only 179 were found in two or more of the nine textbooks. The 179 here mentioned form the civics section of the master list.

Andres J. Kornichuck analyzed the reference readings in three high school sociology and two high school social problems textbooks. A total of 931 different titles were obtained. Of these, only 112 were found in two or more textbooks. Most of the 112 titles consisted of specialized studies and parallel textbooks. The 112 books here form the sociology section of the master list.

1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the success of any business and for the protection of the interests of all parties involved. The author argues that without accurate records, it is impossible to make informed decisions or to identify areas for improvement.

2. The second part of the paper describes the various methods used to collect and analyze data. It discusses the advantages and disadvantages of different techniques, such as surveys, interviews, and focus groups. The author also explains how data can be used to identify trends and patterns, and how this information can be used to develop effective strategies.

3. The third part of the paper discusses the importance of communication in the business world. It emphasizes that clear and concise communication is essential for the success of any organization. The author argues that effective communication can help to build trust, foster collaboration, and improve overall performance.

4. The fourth part of the paper discusses the importance of innovation in the business world. It emphasizes that innovation is essential for the success of any organization in a competitive market. The author argues that innovation can help to create new products, services, and markets, and can help to improve efficiency and reduce costs.

5. The fifth part of the paper discusses the importance of ethics in the business world. It emphasizes that ethical behavior is essential for the success of any organization. The author argues that ethical behavior can help to build trust, foster collaboration, and improve overall performance.

6. The sixth part of the paper discusses the importance of leadership in the business world. It emphasizes that effective leadership is essential for the success of any organization. The author argues that effective leadership can help to build trust, foster collaboration, and improve overall performance.

Summary

In the preceding observations it has been noted that the textbook is the principal tool used in the teaching of the social studies in the junior and senior high schools. Also, it is cited that the textbook is not sufficient material for teaching well founded courses. In conclusion it is noted that despite the many recommendations for well stocked libraries, the present situation indicates that they have gone unheeded. This study is designed to further discover that these proposals have been ignored in the selection of books for school libraries.

CHAPTER II

OUTLINE OF PROCEDURE

CHAPTER II

OUTLINE OF PROCEDURE

From the working list of the seven theses summarized at the close of the previous chapter a master list of nine hundred and ninety-five reference books was compiled. (see appendix.) The intent of this group is to ascertain just how many of these references are available in a certain number of public school and town libraries. It was decided to analyze fourteen high school libraries, fourteen town libraries and seven junior high school libraries all chosen at random. The process proposed was to check the master list of nine hundred and ninety-five books in each one of the thirty-five libraries.

It was further decided to make another list independent of the master list that would encompass all the social studies books (non fiction) found in the high school and junior high school libraries which did not appear on the master list.

In this survey four cities and ten towns were investigated.

The cities investigated ranged in population from 19,210 to 102,177, the average being 61,768 people. The school population had a range of from 6,742 to 32,842, the average being 21,837 students.

The towns investigated ranged in population from 3,111 to 40,013, the average being 16,778 people. The school population ranged from 3,802 to 12,202, the average being 7,611 students.<sup>1</sup>

Statistics pertaining to school population on the smallest town were unavailable.

AMERICAN HISTORY BOOKS

The same master list was used in surveying fourteen town libraries. The following data was procured:

Unlike the other sections in this survey, all of the eighty-five books listed were found in one or another of the town libraries surveyed.

Two were found in only one library. Eighty-three were found in two or more of the town libraries. One of these books, The World Almanac, was found in all fourteen libraries.

The following list includes those books found in two or more of the fourteen libraries. Those books preceded by a star were found in seven or more of the fourteen libraries.

DISTRIBUTION OF JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL
AMERICAN HISTORY BOOKS

After checking the working list in the seven Junior High School libraries and fourteen town libraries, an additional list of Junior High School American History reference books was compiled. This list is composed of reference books that the various school libraries contained that were not on the working list. No one book was found in more than two libraries. The star (*) indicates those books which were found in two libraries.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It is essential for the company to have a clear and concise system in place to ensure that all data is properly recorded and stored. This will allow for easy access and retrieval of information when needed.

The second part of the paper focuses on the importance of regular communication and collaboration between all team members. It is crucial for everyone to stay informed about the company's goals and objectives, as well as the progress of various projects. Regular meetings and updates will help to ensure that everyone is working towards the same goals and that any issues are identified and resolved quickly.

The third part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining a high level of security for all company data. This includes implementing strong password policies, using secure communication channels, and regularly updating software and systems to protect against potential threats. It is also important to ensure that all employees are trained on proper security protocols and are aware of the risks associated with data breaches.

The fourth part of the paper focuses on the importance of maintaining a high level of customer satisfaction. This involves providing excellent customer service, responding to inquiries promptly, and ensuring that all products and services meet the highest quality standards. Regular feedback from customers can help to identify areas for improvement and ensure that the company is always striving to provide the best possible experience.

The fifth part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining a high level of financial transparency. This involves providing regular updates on the company's financial status, including income, expenses, and profits. It is also important to ensure that all financial transactions are properly recorded and audited to ensure accuracy and accountability.

The sixth part of the paper focuses on the importance of maintaining a high level of employee satisfaction. This involves providing a supportive work environment, offering competitive compensation and benefits, and providing opportunities for professional growth and development. Regular communication and feedback from employees can help to identify areas for improvement and ensure that the company is always striving to provide the best possible workplace.

The seventh part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining a high level of environmental sustainability. This involves implementing eco-friendly practices, such as recycling, reducing energy consumption, and using sustainable materials. It is also important to ensure that all company operations are in compliance with relevant environmental regulations and standards.

The eighth part of the paper focuses on the importance of maintaining a high level of social responsibility. This involves supporting local communities, promoting diversity and inclusion, and engaging in philanthropic activities. It is also important to ensure that all company operations are in compliance with relevant social and ethical standards.

The ninth part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining a high level of innovation and creativity. This involves encouraging employees to think outside the box, experiment with new ideas, and embrace failure as a learning opportunity. Regular brainstorming sessions and cross-functional collaboration can help to foster a culture of innovation and ensure that the company is always staying ahead of the competition.

The tenth part of the paper focuses on the importance of maintaining a high level of adaptability and flexibility. This involves being able to quickly respond to changes in the market, technology, and customer needs. It is also important to ensure that the company has a clear and flexible strategy in place to guide its future growth and development.

CIVICS

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL CIVICS

The civics section of the working list (see appendix) used in this survey lists 179 reference books.<sup>1</sup>

Thirty-nine of these books were not found in any of the seven junior high school libraries surveyed in this study. Fifty-seven of them were found in only one of the high schools.

Eighty-three of the reference books were found in two or more of the seven junior high school libraries. The following list includes the books found in two or more of the junior high school libraries. Also in the following list the books preceded by one star were found in four or more of the libraries. Only six were found in all seven libraries. These are preceded by a double star.

ECONOMICS

The Economics section of the working list (see appendix) used in this survey lists 143 reference books.<sup>1</sup>

Seventy-three of these books were not found in any of the fourteen high school libraries surveyed. Twenty-nine were found in only one of the fourteen high school libraries. Forty-one were found in two or more of the high school libraries. No one book was found in all fourteen high school libraries.

The following list includes those books found in two or more of the high school libraries. Of this list only the one starred was found in more than half of the fourteen libraries.

DISTRIBUTION OF ECONOMICS BOOKS

The chart illustrates the progression of values, with the final bar reaching the highest point on the scale shown.

The same working list was used in surveying fourteen town libraries.

Eighteen of the 143 books were not found in any of the town libraries surveyed. Twenty-four were found in only one of the libraries.

One hundred and two were found in two or more of the libraries, but no one book was found in all fourteen libraries. Eleven were not found in either a high school or town library of those surveyed.

The following list includes those books found in two or more of the fourteen town libraries, and only the thirty starred are those books found in seven or more of the town libraries.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the transparency and accountability of the organization. This section also outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze data, ensuring that the information is reliable and up-to-date.

2. The second part of the document focuses on the implementation of the proposed changes. It details the steps involved in the transition process, from the initial planning phase to the final execution. This section also addresses the potential challenges and risks associated with the changes, providing strategies to mitigate them.

3. The third part of the document discusses the impact of the changes on the organization's overall performance. It highlights the positive outcomes achieved, such as increased efficiency and cost savings. This section also acknowledges the areas where further improvement is needed and provides recommendations for future actions.

4. The fourth part of the document provides a summary of the key findings and conclusions. It reiterates the importance of the changes and the commitment of the organization to continuous improvement. This section also includes a list of references and a glossary of terms used throughout the document.

GEOGRAPHY

The Geography section of the working list (see appendix) used in this survey lists 138 reference books.<sup>1</sup>

Fifty-seven of the books were not found in any of the fourteen senior high school libraries surveyed. Thirty were found in only one of the fourteen school libraries surveyed.

Fifty-one were found in two or more of the fourteen libraries surveyed. No one book was found in all of the fourteen libraries.

The following list includes those books found in two or more of the senior high school libraries surveyed. Those books preceded by a star were found in seven or more of the fourteen libraries.

NUMBER OF SCHOOL LIBRARIES

DISTRIBUTION OF GEOGRAPHY BOOKS

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$ . It is shown that the system has solutions for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  if and only if the condition  $\alpha + \beta = 1$  is satisfied.

2. In the second part of the paper the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  is solved. It is shown that the system has solutions for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  if and only if the condition  $\alpha + \beta = 1$  is satisfied.

3. In the third part of the paper the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  is solved. It is shown that the system has solutions for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  if and only if the condition  $\alpha + \beta = 1$  is satisfied.

4. In the fourth part of the paper the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  is solved. It is shown that the system has solutions for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  if and only if the condition  $\alpha + \beta = 1$  is satisfied.

5. In the fifth part of the paper the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  is solved. It is shown that the system has solutions for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  if and only if the condition  $\alpha + \beta = 1$  is satisfied.

6. In the sixth part of the paper the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  is solved. It is shown that the system has solutions for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  if and only if the condition  $\alpha + \beta = 1$  is satisfied.

The same working list was used in surveying fourteen town libraries.

Fourteen of the 138 books were not found in any of the town libraries. Twenty-five were found in only one of the town libraries. Ninety-nine were found in two or more of the town libraries, but no one was found in all of the fourteen libraries. Seven of the 138 books were not found in either a high school or a town library of those fourteen surveyed.

The following list is the books found in two or more of the fourteen town libraries. The books preceded by a star were found in seven or more of the fourteen libraries.

After checking the working list in the fourteen high school libraries and the fourteen town libraries, an additional list of geography reference books was compiled. This list is composed of the reference books that the various school libraries contained that were not on the working list. Of the list, only the ten starred books appeared in two or more of the libraries and no one book appeared in more than eight of the libraries. The starred books appeared in seven of the fourteen libraries.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that a knowledge of the past is essential for a full understanding of the present. The author then goes on to discuss the various factors which have shaped the development of the United States, including the influence of the British, the Spanish, and the French. He also discusses the role of the American people in the creation of the new nation. The paper concludes by stating that the study of the history of the United States is a task of great importance, and that it is one which should be undertaken by all who are interested in the future of the country.

SOCIOLOGY

The Sociology section of the working list (see appendix) used in this survey lists one hundred and eleven reference books.

Forty-five of these books were not found in any of the town libraries surveyed. No one book was found in all of the fourteen town libraries. Twenty-six were found in only one of the fourteen town libraries. Thirty-four were found in two or more of the town libraries.

The following is the list of books found in two or more of the fourteen libraries. In the following list the books preceded by a star were found in seven or more of the libraries.

Only one book, Magruder, F., American Government: A Consideration of the Problems of Democracy, appeared in seven or more of the high schools and seven or more of the public libraries.

After checking the working list in the fourteen high school libraries and in the fourteen public libraries, an additional list of Sociology reference books was compiled. This list is composed of the reference books that the various school libraries contained that were not on the working list. Books starred appear in two or more of the high school libraries. No one book appeared in more than three of the high school libraries.

FINDINGS

The following is a complete breakdown of the work in the preceding chapter. The intent here is to show in relation to the total number of textbooks (nine hundred and ninety-five) how many are available or not, as the case may be, and in just how many libraries.

Table number I (on following page) indicates the total number and extent of availability of reference books in the high school and junior high school.

The results of the additional list made in each field of our study produced a total of 1,239 reference books. Of this number 158 were found in two or more libraries but no one book was found in more than five libraries.

CHAPTER IV.
CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

CONCLUSIONS

Books are not found in school libraries

A check of Chart I on page        shows that the vast majority of the 995 reference books on the working list are not available in the twenty-one schools checked. The same chart shows that 272 are not found in any library, 212 were found in only one, and 149 were found in only two. In other words, approximately two-thirds of the supplementary books most commonly mentioned in social studies textbooks can only be found in less than ten percent of the school libraries.

More books found in public libraries

A check of Chart II on page        shows the books on the working list are more easily obtained in public libraries than in the schools. However, the chart shows that even here the availability could not be classified as effective. More than half the books can only be found in less than a third of the public libraries.

Selection of reference books

The facts presented in the two previous paragraphs substantiate the conclusions reached by the writers of

CHAPTER I

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and development. It begins with the first settlers who came to the New World in search of a better life. They found a land of opportunity, but also a land of challenges. The early years were marked by conflict and struggle, but the spirit of the American people was one of resilience and determination. They fought for their rights and their freedom, and in the end, they won. The United States emerged as a nation of great power and influence, and its story continues to unfold today.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

The American Revolution was a turning point in the history of the United States. It was a time of great change and transformation. The people of the colonies had grown tired of being ruled by a distant king, and they demanded more rights and more freedom. They fought a war of independence, and in the end, they won. The United States was born, and its story began anew. The revolution was not just a war, it was a movement. It was a movement for a better future, for a more just society, and for a more powerful nation.

THE AMERICAN WEST

The American West was a land of great promise and great peril. It was a land of opportunity, but also a land of danger. The pioneers who came to the West in search of a better life found a land of great beauty and great challenges. They fought for their rights and their freedom, and in the end, they won. The American West became a part of the United States, and its story continues to unfold today.

the cooperative studies of 1947 and 1948 that there should be more agreement by textbook writers on the selection of reference books.

No agreement among school libraries

The additional list as worked up by this study shows a further interesting point. The additional list results compared with the working list reveals that out of twenty-one schools, 1239 books were found. Of this number, only 158 books were found in two or more of the libraries, and no one book was found in more than five of them. This shows that there is very little agreement among schools and librarians as to the content of a good social studies library. The books suggested by the textbook writers are not as a general rule available and the libraries independently use no system in choosing reference books for their libraries.

The authors do not here presume to suggest standardization or complete uniformity, however it does appear that there should be a certain amount of agreement with regard to the reference books in the social studies.

LIMITATIONS OF THIS STUDY

Anonymity of school systems

It would be helpful to name the towns surveyed in this study, but, in several instances, school administrators requested their systems remain anonymous. Therefore, in order to secure their cooperation, the writers conformed to their wishes.

Subjects not known if taught

The sections on Economics, Problems of Democracy and Sociology would be more useful if the subjects were taught in all school systems surveyed.

Larger area should be covered

The writers realize that the greatest limitation of their study is that it did not cover a larger area.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Full time libraries

The fight for full time libraries which are not merely glorified classrooms and which are equipped with well-trained librarians should be taken up by teachers and layman alike.

A general list needed

A study should be made to set up a criteria for the adoption of a general list of references for each of the seven social studies surveyed in this project.

Addition of new books

A committee should be set up by the national social studies organizations with whom publishers could consult on the addition of new books to this list.

A national study should be undertaken

Studies similar to this conducted on a national scale would show whether the pitiful conditions revealed here are confined to a particular region, or, as the present writers suspect, are to be found in all parts of the country.

The first of these is the fact that the government has been unable to secure the necessary funds to carry out its policy of maintaining the value of the pound sterling. This has led to a situation where the government has been forced to resort to measures which are not in accordance with the principles of sound finance. The second point is that the government has been unable to secure the necessary funds to carry out its policy of maintaining the value of the pound sterling.
 This has led to a situation where the government has been forced to resort to measures which are not in accordance with the principles of sound finance. The third point is that the government has been unable to secure the necessary funds to carry out its policy of maintaining the value of the pound sterling. This has led to a situation where the government has been forced to resort to measures which are not in accordance with the principles of sound finance.

The first of these is the fact that the world is not a uniform whole, but a collection of many different parts, each
 with its own characteristics and laws.
 This is the principle of diversity, and it is the basis of all knowledge. Without it, we could not understand the world, for we should be unable to distinguish between the different parts of the whole. It is the same with the human mind. The mind is not a single, uniform entity, but a collection of many different faculties, each with its own powers and limitations.
 This is the principle of complexity, and it is the basis of all thought. Without it, we could not think, for we should be unable to distinguish between the different parts of the mind. It is the same with the universe. The universe is not a single, uniform whole, but a collection of many different parts, each with its own laws and characteristics. This is the principle of multiplicity, and it is the basis of all existence. Without it, we could not exist, for we should be unable to distinguish between the different parts of the universe. It is the same with everything. Everything is a collection of many different parts, each
 with its own characteristics and laws.
 This is the principle of unity, and it is the basis of all knowledge, thought, and existence. Without it, we could not understand the world, think, or exist.
